The greatest of poets—perhaps the greatest of men—was Shakespeare, the poet critic. Vast as was his imagination, it was not to it alone that his pre-eminence among men was due; no one ever lived who saw more clearly into the most secret recesses of man and nature than be. The student of his works could find within the student of within them matter as valuable to him as Christians find in the Bible. The great Christians find in the Bible. The great master was as decidedly a materialist as Carl Vogt, and evidence of this was not difficult to find in his dramas, especially in "Hamlet," where it may most surely be seen in the "solitoquy." But his other plays were full of it also, as "Troilus and Cressida," where Theraite says, speaking of Achilles and Patrocius.

Had his fortunes been cast in pleasanter places—had he enjoyed the advantages of education of the supply is cut off or diminished physical and culture—he would have been a noted man. He was a Methodist minister, and a fivent and forcible speaker.

It is to be hoped our brother of the Democrat will not rush things. factly sure that the election on the fourth Thursday of October was the legal and regular one and must be recognised as such by the House. Why this sudden change of front directly after that elech has been held? Nothing has transpired to alter the law.

And now, the New Fork Post has West Virginia set down for a Congressional election in November. We feel bound to protess against any more Coogressional elections in this State this year. We have had three now in a little over sixty days, and that ought to be enough.

School amborities in some quarters are taking ground against the prize medal system as hurtful to the physical and mental health of the pupits. The Boston Public School Committee recently declined to accept a legary for the re-stablishment of the rejected prize medal system as the Congregationalist in referring to the fact speaks of the case of a young lady, a recent graduate of a Boston high school, who, after going through with examinations and the crowning erhibition, slept for three days and hights and had to be aroused to take her meals, and y physician knows what that fact means, and will say that if the young lady recovers from the effects of the moral and intellectual stimulus after months of rest she will be fortunate. The Congregationolist, also, mentions another case where a teacher was so anxious to keep one of his bright boys up to the mark in the competitive task that when the boy was taken down with the scarlet iever he (the teacher) called upon the father and actually proposed to give the pupil two hours drill nightly while he was sick.

A California and the crowning is reliable to the proposition of the prize of the rest should be a citied rin a marked degree from those of thinking is its function. When have been present pr tion, such as fineness of texture and occupation. Cultivation and civilization, enlarged thought, and fields in which brain power is required will enlarge the brain, as has recently been shown by experiments made in France. The comparative size of the brains of Germans, Englishmen, Frenchmen, and Europeans generally is large, that of Asiatics small, the distrement paying, to some extent been seril. serence having, to some extent, been brought about by the different civiliza-tions of the two continents—the active life of the one and the mactive existence life of the one and the inactive existence dreamed away in the other. The brain of man is larger than that of woman, and this fact has been shown as a materialistic reason for believing women to be the inferiors of men; but isdies should not hang their heads on that account, for as the whale was not more elevated than man on account of his bigger encephalon, neither was the female man less than he. Women have smaller hodies and finer nerves than men and reneither was the female man less than he. Women have smaller bodies and finer nerves than men, and relatively their brains were as large as his, and finer. But here there is another difficulty. The forepart of the brain, the cinciput, is supposed to be the seat of intelligence, and in this respect women must be held to be less intellectual than the sterner sex, since their cinciputs were comparatively small. But the fact is not fully established, and as woman are better educated they will have their foreheads educated they will have their toreheads increased. As to the phenomena of sleep, somnambulism, somniloquism, unconsci-ous motions, and other such things, materialism gave ample explanation of them by the well-known doctrine of reflex ac son. The hypothesis of the existence of a soal separate from the body does not, telentifically speaking, explain my phenomena of mentality. No knife of the surgeou, no scientific research of any sort can detect a soul a "sprint" "sensitive." can detect a soul, a "spirit," "spiritus,

"breath," nor any "substance" of the sor there is therefore no reason to believe in its existence now, and a fortiori, no rea-son to hold its separate immortality. Within the brain, and within it only dwell all thought and aspiration; it is the oaly temple of the soul, built up of mil-lions of cells—a temple not made with hands—it arches over and glorifies all lower life of the body, and within it shall bought dwell forever as its only home There is no individual immortality in some far-off heaven where the saints sh reign as men glorified. The only immor-tality of men is the immortality of man —of the race and its successors. With this who shall not be satisfied? A race growing in intellectual strength surpassing ours is something to hope for rather than a petty individual eternity. In the brain is the noblest world; in the language of Schiller in "The Death of Walleostein"

"Eng ist die Welt, und das Gehirn ist Weit."
(The world is pent-the brain is vast.)
